

Hello everyone, If you have not watched the ^{info} videos on my ^{website} please do that as I have put together some great videos on the raw diet to help get you started and understanding what it is about. I spend a lot of time trying to educate people on raising your puppies naturally and feeding a species appropriate diet. This is how you will give them a long healthy life without spending thousands at the vet. Food is medicine. 90% of the immune system is in the gut so it is very important to keep that healthy. I'm giving you information on what the puppies are eating right now for the raw diet so you can order and have things ready for when the puppies come home. They are eating a complete balanced raw(not cooked) diet. Puppies require a complete balanced meal every day for proper development. # you want to get a premade complete meal [REDACTED] A complete meal consists of 80% protein, 10% bone, 10% organ/offal and adding several supplements. You will want to incorporate three to four different proteins, bone either ground or whole and heart liver and kidney. We also add egg, sardines, oysters, coconut oil, garlic, [REDACTED] and a probiotic. For a pre made to get started, you have a couple of options. There is Stella and chewies which is sold at most pet food stores in the freezer section. They have frozen patties in all proteins. You will want to read the ingredients to mix and match the different protein patties to make sure you are getting the bone and all organs. Pawfectly Raw of New England in Manchester NH has everything and makes protein mixes and organ grinds. You can either pick up there if you are local or they have a delivery route. Check out their website. We use them for a lot of our food and the puppies are eating two of their protein mixes which consist of beef, tripe, ground chicken leg quarters, liver, kidney and heart. The puppies are eating twice a day and I will be giving you paperwork that has feeding instructions on it.

Dry kibble food is a highly processed food that is nutrient deficient and is made with inferior ingredients with a lot of carcinogens in it. It is a deficient diet all around. If you are only feeding kibble you are not feeding your pets correctly and this is what causes a lot of health issues. Dogs eating kibble food is like you eating chips and cookies every single meal for your entire life. The majority of skin issues and allergies are from the kibble food.

Dogs are being way over vaccinated and it is important to only do their three puppy shots for the distemper and parvo and then they are done. They do not need to be vaccinated every year or every three years as the vets get you to do. Dog vaccines work just like human vaccines. We are vaccinated as babies and toddlers and then we receive our immunities for life. It is important to only get one vaccine at a time not several vaccines at one visit. Do not get Lyme or leptospirosis and kennel cough only if required to board. The only other vaccine you need by law is rabies. We also encourage you to do natural products for flea and tick such as essential oil sprays and the garlic that is used in the diet. Flea and tick products you get from the veterinarians are neurotoxins and they work on the nervous system and they are very dangerous. You are actually poisoning your dog every single month by using these. They are causing a lot of problems with health issues, personality changes and the number one side effect is seizures. They can even cause death. Heart worm pills are another poison and are not necessary living in the northern states. The veterinarians do not tell you the truth about heartworm because it is a billion dollar industry. Heartworm is a hot weather disease and the temperatures have to be 80 degrees around the clock for two or more weeks in order for it to develop. I do not give heartworm and haven't in over 10 years. Garlic is a great bug deterrent and it also works as a natural wormer and has anti fungal and antiviral properties. Garlic is not toxic to dogs in the proper dosage.
